About the school: SKOLKOVO School of Management is a 18-year-old private institution founded by leading Russian entrepreneurs and companies. The school offers MBA, Executive MBA, as well as open and customized executive education programs on its state-of-the-art campus in Moscow. SKOLKOVO is EQUIS Accredited and ranked 21st in the world by Financial Times at Customized Executive Education 2022 - the top business school in Russia and Eastern Europe.

The ideal candidate should have a proven track of publications in journals included in the ABDC

Journal Quality list. Publications in FT50 journals would be an advantage. We are interested in candidates who will continue to produce research of excellent quality that will have a high impact on their respective fields.

The primary responsibilities for each position include intensive research with minimal teaching load and engaging in service activities for the academic discipline and the school. Our ideal candidates will contribute to the diversity and excellence of our current faculty through their expertise and commitment.

Qualifications

Interested candidates should have a PhD in a business discipline or a closely related area, a strong record of excellence in teaching and an established track record of international publications.

Application Instructions

Please upload the following materials:

1. Academic CV
2. Research papers
3. Research pipeline
4. References
5. Personal statement describing research and teaching experience (if any) as well as aspirations in research and education

Incomplete or improperly submitted applications will be excluded from consideration.

Short-listed candidates will be invited to interviews with the school's leadership and online or offline research sessions.

All positions are based in Moscow with three-year contracts available on a competitive basis. The school provides a comprehensive expatriate package, including housing and schooling allowances. The level of compensation is discussed with successful candidates.
