Assistant, Associate or Full Professor of Organizational Behavior (m/f/d)

We are looking for colleagues to further strengthen Frankfurt School research on organizational behavior. The ideal candidate advances scientific insight into any area of Organizational Behavior, broadly defined (including but not restricted to micro- and meso-level OB, Leadership, HR, and People Management). In terms of teaching, the ideal candidate would be able to use a strong research basis in OB to derive implications/messages for leadership.

We explicitly welcome applications by women and international candidates. German language skills are not required for working at Frankfurt School.

The positions remain open until filled. We will begin reviewing applications on the 15th of October 2025. Applications should be submitted via Interfolio (<https://apply.interfolio.com/170372>). Interested candidates can reach out and meet informally with members of the department at the Copenhagen AoM. We look forward to getting to know you.

Junior applicants need to complete their Ph.D. degree in management or a related field, by August 2026. The application package should consist of a CV, the job market paper, up to two additional works (published or unpublished), a research statement, a teaching statement (and evaluations), and three letters of reference (senior applicants may prefer to provide referee contact details).
