ABOUT YOU

Candidates must demonstrate research productivity and have a proven track record of teaching.

Experience in the use of blended learning for teaching is considered a plus.

The position requires a doctorate in a related field. The salary is commensurate with candidate's experience and qualifications and in line with the system of remuneration at Excelia Group and includes incentives for research publications.

Excelia Group actively seeks to increase the number of international professors among its faculty. It also adheres to a policy of diversity and gender equality across all fields of its activities.

APPLICATIONS

Candidates should submit a letter of application, a full curriculum vita (including teaching description and current research in progress), one or two research papers, evidence of teaching effectiveness, transcripts, and at least 3 confidential letters of reference forwarded directly. We encourage candidates to describe their experience with a variety of teaching methods and curricular perspectives. The evaluation committee may ask candidates for supplementary information.

Candidates should send their application to the Department Director concerned and to recrutement@excelia-group.com

ABOUT THE SCHOOL

Created in 1988, Excelia currently educates more than 5,500 undergraduate and postgraduate students across its 5 schools: Excelia Business School, Excelia Tourism School, Excelia Academy, Excelia Digital School, and Excelia Executive Education, located on its 4 campuses in La Rochelle, Tours, Orleans and Paris.

Excelia is a member of the French major Business School association, Conférence des Grandes Ecoles (CGE), and is featured in national Business School rankings as well as in prestigious international rankings. In 2022, its Master in Management program was ranked 36nd worldwide by the Financial Times, and 6th place among French business schools. Furthermore, Excelia Business School holds AACSB, EQUIS, and AMBA accreditations, for its Master in Management program.

Excelia is a higher education institute with a strong commitment to research, with an active and dynamic Faculty of 100 permanent members, spread over 5 teaching and research departments. Excelia focusses on 3 interdisciplinary areas of research: Sustainable Development and CSR, Tourism Management, and Agility, Innovation and Digitalisation (AID).

As part of its 2020-2025 strategic plan, Excelia is recruiting more than 60 teacher-researchers offering a considerable momentum of publication in academic journals. We especially appreciate candidates who can root their research activities in one of our 3 expertise areas.

Committed since 1999, Excelia integrates sustainable development as a strategic pillar of research and its teachings. The School develops research with strong societal utility, in particular through its institute dedicated to CSR, the IRSI (Institut de la Responsabilité Sociétale par l'innovation / Institute for Social Responsibility through Innovation). The IRSI has set itself three objectives: Contribute to the development of research in management sciences on CSR and sustainable development; Advance CSR by supporting organizations and training students; Develop standards for social responsibility.

Since 2017, Excelia has been labeled EESPIG (Etablissement d'enseignement supérieur privé d'intérêt général / private higher education establishment of general interest) by the Ministry of Higher Education and Research, recognizing the group's mission of general interest.
